History

Be ready, it's a really long story.....

The story of the Fire civ is not starting during the session 1 but during the session 2. A group of people praying for the Life god were leaving the spawn area to find the perfect place to start a new civilization, however during the traveling a mysterious red, orange et yellow god appear in front of us, helping us during the night and claiming to know a place where to live. But the people from the group didn't want to listen and to follow this mysterious god, they already knew where to live and who to follow, however 3 members wanted to trust this god and wanted to find this paradise. After arriving to this place the mysterious god present himself, claiming to be the Fire God. Faithful_Heart, Warming_Aether and Crimson_Pearl started to pray the fire and to follow the path of the flame.

The beginning of the civilization was not easy at all, create a civilization with 3 people is not something everyone can do, but we did it, we took time and a lot of energy and with the help of our God we manage to grow up and to finally have a proper civilization at the eyes of the other civilization. We mainly focus our effort on grindings materials and food, and not really the building, we didn't have enough player to have full time builder.

Because we were really far from almost everyone ( being at the world border ) people didn't know where we were and who was in the civilization but this far distance from everyone granted us security and peace ( until a moment ).After gathering enough ressource to get almost a full iron set for everyone our leaders started to talk to other civilization to make them know who we were, however doing that had led us to a terrible evenement.

After finally being able to live without danger we got attacked by the Ocean god with huge water pillar around our base, we saw that clearly as an attack from the Ocean Civilization and after an advice from Igneous_Dawn we started gear up to be ready in case the Ocean Civilization wanted to attacked us. Like always our God was right, because not a long time after we saw an little army of player lead by a player named Golden_Pearl claiming they were here to kill our god, they started talk about their vision of the other gods and their will to kill every single god. But our civilization and our leader being fellow followers of Igneous_Dawn stated that if they really wanted to kill our god they will have to kill us first, after those word the axe of Golden_Pearl sank into Faithful_Heart flesh, and like this the first Fire Civilization war just started...
